There is naturally a close connection between the values of any tradition and its underlying beliefs or concepts. For example, belief in reincarnation significantly influences Hindu attitudes towards animals, and issues on the sanctity of life, such as abortion. According to Hindu theology, the highest values are related to sattva, the quality of goodness, represented by the brahmanas.

Values and Concepts - Heart Of Hinduism

Although Hinduism is an accommodating tradition, its values are not entirely fluid. They may not be constrained by a single or static set of beliefs, but they are guided by the need to comply with universal principles, and the desire to discern truth from illusion (maya). In exploring this topic, therefore, it is useful to recognise that Hinduism has its own distinctive perspectives, as we list below:
