The Male Gaze in Retrospect

Mulvey's essay is heavily invested in theory. It is cited as "the founding document of feminist film theory" [Modleski 1989], as providing "the theoretical grounds for the rejection of Hollywood and its pleasures" [Penley 1988], and even as setting out feminist film theory's "axioms" [Silverman, quoted in Byars 1991].

Feminist Film Theory

It is only a slight exaggeration to say that most feminist film theory, and criticism of the last decade has been a response, implicit or explicit, to, the issues raised in Laura Mulvey's article: the centrality of the look, cinema as spectacle and narrative, psychoanalysis as a critical tool. My aim.

Film Theory and Criticism: Introductory Readings by Leo Braudy

Feminist film theory is a film criticism derived from feminist politics and feminist theory. The best way to summarize Feminist Film Theory is this: Most movies are made by men and controlled by men. Therefore, cinema as a whole has been created through the lens of the " male gaze " and thus forced roles and stereotypes onto women that may negatively affect their social standing.
