It is of critical importance to maintain an appropriate balance between proliferation and quiescence or differentiation through out the lifespan of all animals. An important control point in this balance occurs in the G₁ phase of the cell cycle. On the basis of environmental cues a cell in G₁ must decide whether to continue through the proliferative cycle and enter S phase (where DNA replication occurs) or to exit from the proliferative cycle into a nonreplicating state. Alterations in the mechanisms that normally control this decision can lead to cancer, cell death, or loss of differentiated cellular phenotypes. The identification of the E2F gene family of transcription factors has allowed a more complete understanding of how the cell maintains an appropriate proliferative state. This volume provides an up-to-date account of present reports concerning E2F as well as a framework for future investigations. E2F activity requires heterodimerization of two partners. Either partner can be one of several different transcription factors; E2F1, E2F2, E2F3, E2F4, or E2F5 can heterodimerize with either DP1 or DP2. Cellular promoters whose E2F sites mediate a link between transcription and proliferation drive genes whose products are required for DNA synthesis and genes that encode regulators of cell growth. A detailed analysis of the role that E2F family members play in transcription from these promoters is presented in the chapter by J. E. SLANSKY and P. J. FARNHAM.

This book constitutes the refereed proceedings of the 19th International Symposium on Stabilization, Safety, and Security of Distributed Systems, SSS 2017, held in Boston, MA, USA, in November 2017. The 29 revised full papers presented together with 8 revised short papers were carefully reviewed and selected from 68 initial submissions. This year the Symposium was organized into three tracks reflecting major trends related to self-* systems: Stabilizing Systems: Theory and Practice: Distributed Computing and Communication Networks; and Computer Security and Information Privacy.

It is our pleasure to welcome you to the 11th International Conference on Principles of Distributed Systems (OPODIS2007), held during December 17-20, 2007, in Guadeloupe, French West Indies. During the past years, OPODIS has established itself as one of the most important events related to principles of distributed computing, networks and systems. In this year's edition, we received 106 submissions in response to the call for papers. Papers were sought soliciting original research contributions to the theory, specifications, design and implementation of distributed systems, including: communication and synchronization protocols; distributed algorithms, multiprocessor algorithms; distributed cooperative computing; embedded systems; fault-tolerance, reliability, availability; grid and cluster computing; location- and context-aware systems; mobile agents and autonomous robot; mobile computing and networks; peer-to-peer systems, overlay networks; complexity and lower bounds; performance analysis of distributed systems; real-time systems; security issues in distributed computing and systems; sensor networks: theory and practice; specification and verification of distributed systems; testing and experimentation with distributed systems. It was a hard task to select the 32 excellent papers that are compiled in this volume. All submissions received at least three reviews, resulting in an overall number of more than 350 reviews--involving more than 100 reviewers-- being conducted. A nimportant piece of the process was the Program Committee e electronic meeting held during the week of September 10. It was de'nitely an outstanding performance by all 42 Program Committee members and their - reviewers. We are convinced that a very good set of papers was selected for presentation at OPODIS 2007.
