Narayan's The Guide—as well as his larger body of work—represents part of the emergence of Anglo-Indian literature in the first half of the twentieth century, under what was then British rule in India. During this period, a number of Indian writers, most notably Raja Rao and Mulk Raj Anand, in addition to Narayan, began writing and publishing works in the English language which would go on to find a wide readership both within India and outside of it.

The Guide is a 1958 novel written in English by the Indian author R. K. Narayan. Like most of his works the novel is based on Malgudi, the fictional town in South India. The novel describes the transformation of the protagonist, Raju, from a tour guide to a spiritual guide and then one of the greatest holy men of India.

~~The Guide - Wikipedia~~

Narayan's The Guide depicts modernization overtaking protagonist-narrator Raju 's hometown of Malgudi in southern India during the early twentieth century. Not only are new technologies associated with industrialization—such as the railroad—introduced during this period, but social relations are also upended as hierarchies of caste and gender are re-negotiated.

Raju thought about his past life as a tourist guide. He lived in a small house opposite to Malgudi Railway Station. His father had a small shop and all day he sat there selling peppermint, fruit, tobacco, betel leaf, parched gram, and whatever else the wayfarers on the Trunk Road demanded. It was known as the 'hut- shop'.
