The ham radio works using frequencies, and it can operate via a range of them. It's even possible for those who are considered non-hams to listen in to the frequencies when using a radio scanner or receiver of their own. The frequencies that hams are able to use, because of the broad spectrum, are allocated by the FCC for amateur use.

Ham radio is a popular term for amateur radio, derived from "ham" as an informal name for an amateur radio operator. The use first appeared in the United States during the opening decade of the 20th century—for example, in 1909, Robert A. Morton reported overhearing an amateur radio transmission which included the comment: "Say, do you know the fellow who is putting up a new station out your way? I think he is a ham." However, the term did not gain widespread usage in the United States ...
