Hannah Harrington is the exception that proves the rule. This lady is American and what is more, Saving June is her debut novel.
Harper's life is in pieces. Her sister June unexplainably committed suicide a few weeks before graduating and her family is, quite understandably, a wreck.

Saving June by Hannah Harrington - Goodreads

Hannah Harrington is a 23-yearsold. She got the idea for Saving June during the summer after high school, while living out of her car and working as a pizza cook. It wasn't until she was twenty-one that she decided to write a story around the scenes she'd scribbled into a notebook years before.

Saving June's premise is a fairly simple one: Harper Scott's older sister June committed suicide, and Harper's separated parents decide to split her ashes between them.
Harper takes June's ashes with the intention of scattering them in California, a place June never got to visit, and is accompanied by best friend Laney and June's friend Jake.

Rather, Saving June was about a teenager trying to cope with her older sister's suicide. This sounded like a relatable, if grim subject. Harper Scott is sixteen years old; her sister June was just a year older, and about to graduate from high school, when Harper found her in the family garage, dead from carbon monoxide poisoning.
