Testing seems an obvious choice to Jonny and Dr. Hermann Reuter (of MSF): If Sizwe takes the test and has positive results, he will be prescribed ARVs that will keep him healthy and able to support his family. But Sizwe fears his village's reaction. A positive HIV result brings disdain: he's witnessed it himself when others have tested.

If Sizwe tests positive, it's likely that he'll lose the clientele he's built up for his shop. He also knows that if he dies, his family will seize his hard-won earnings instead of taking care of his young son. There are also fears that westerners have discovered a cure for AIDS and are deliberately holding it back from Africans.
