Not only was Gwenllian the heiress of the royal family of Aberffraw, she was also related, through her mother Eleanor, to the crown of England: her great-grandfather was King John of England. Gwenllian was only a few months old when North Wales was threatened by the English army. Her father was killed near Irfon Bridge on 11th December 1282. There are several conflicting accounts of her father's death, however it is widely agreed that Llywelyn was tricked into straying from the bulk of his ...
