God Does Not Always Get What God Wants - Graden Kirksey - Uncontrolling Love Thomas Jay Oord 3 FALLING MADLY IN LOVE WITH GOD - last sermon to his church Francis Chan The Uncontrolling Love Of God
Drawing from Scripture, science, philosophy and various theological traditions, Thomas Jay Oord offers a novel theology of providence--essential kenosis--that emphasizes God's inherently noncoercive love in relation to creation. The Uncontrolling Love of God provides a clear and powerful response to one of the perennial challenges to Christian faith.

"Thomas Oord's The Uncontrolling Love of God is an ambitious book offering a new account of divine sovereignty, divine interaction with creation, a new response to the problem of evil, and other issues needed for a plausible model of God. This account is presented in accessible prose, suitable for any college educated reader."

The Uncontrolling Love of God - InterVarsity Press

And lastly the term I'll use in this post is the Uncontrolling Love of God. The basic tenets of this theology are 1) that God's very nature, that is, what makes God God, is Love, as the author of 1 John testified. And 2) that Love is inherently uncontrolling. Hence God is Uncontrolling Love. This means that when tragedies like the coronavirus happen or the holocaust God is not responsible for failing to prevent such events.

Origen And The Uncontrolling Love of God

Tom: The way I put it technically is this: love is inherently uncontrolling and love comes logically first in God's nature. Which means that God can't choose not to love, God can't choose to control. It's God's very nature to love in an uncontrolling way. Pete: Okay

Tom Oord's The Uncontrolling Love of God: An Open and Relational Account of God's Providence (IVP, 2016) has sold very well, including the Kindle version that has slept unread on my iPad for the past year. But now I'm teaching a course in contemporary theology, so the timing was good to read Oord alongside my students.

The Uncontrolling Love of God: An Open and Relational ...

In The Uncontrolling Love of God, Thomas Oord makes the argument that God's nature is uncontrolling love. Because it goes against God's very nature to unilaterally take control of a situation and coercively guarantee an outcome, Dr. Oord says God works through humans who cooperate with his influence and will.

The point is this: If God's love is uncontrolling, we should not say God allows evil or horrific events to occur. Instead, we should say it is impossible for God to control people and events. And this uncontrolling influence enables free creatures, randomness, and law-like regularities (e.g. gravity, weather systems, etc.) that sometimes run amok.

Thomas Jay Oord, in his work, The Uncontrolling Love of God, goes as far as to offer an answer to this predicament so poignantly problematized by Wolterstorff. Although I must admit that I am one-part skeptical and one-part excited whenever I hear that a theologian has stepped forth to solve the problem of evil, I am very compelled by Oord's proposed account of theodicy, the essential kenosis model of providence.
